Justice Delivery System and Judicial Ethics in India

The Indian Judicial system subscribes to 'justice, equity and good-conscience' and grounded in 'rule of law' under the Constitution of India, 1950 an admirable frame-work for dispensation of justice. The Indian judiciary which integrated India has earned for itself a unique distinction as one of the most efficient judicial systems of the world in an admirable frame-work for dispensation of justice. The Indian Constitution contemplates justice, social, economic and political as the most important feature of constitutional morality and Indian Public Administration. The Constitutional morality envisages the parameters of judicial ethics and reverence to constitutional forms of functioning. The Supreme Court and the High Courts of India have given due respect for its human rights jurisprudence by empowerment of weaker sections of society. The record of the Indian Judicial System in the near seventy years of its functioning is a mixture of admirable successes and failures. The time has come to suggest a constructive endeavor by the legal fraternity consisting of judges, jurists, legal academics and lawyers to ponder over the immediate priorities of the judiciary to discharge the divine responsibility of rendering justice, social, economic and political to the people of India. Therefore, the proposed volume on Justice Delivery System and Judicial Ethics in India solicits your valuable contribution on issues of relevance on the following themes:
